Proprietor, Sree Krishna Enterprises

For a company dedicated to customer satisfaction & innovation, we have grown beyond our original boundaries through textile machinery.

Our strong relationship with suppliers and loyal customers is the pillar of the company and has encouraged us to take our business to a new level. We source all the equipment required to manufacture textile products based on the client's requirements, especially the spares that keep equipment running beyond its expected lifespan.

At Sree Krishna Enterprises, we will continue to serve the global textile industry by delivering the right, modern equipment to textile manufacturers.

"Customer satisfaction and the ability to transform with the market remain the key aspects of the company's success. The company has achieved great heights and continues to develop through its vow of customer satisfaction."

Every machine is unique, with numerous parts and joints that keep it in motion. Finding the same or equivalent parts for a machine is a back-breaking process, and our job is to ease that burden. To keep things simple, we have categorised weaving loom spares as below, with further sub-categories.

PROJECTILE LOOM

The projectile loom is a unique weaving technology, and Sulzer is the only company to have successfully brought it to the commercial market.

Because its manufacture is a monopoly, acquiring original spare parts for these machines can be both expensive and time-consuming.

RAPIER LOOM

Rapier looms are a major success in the textile weaving industry thanks to their cost-effectiveness and versatility in producing a variety of patterns on a single machine.

Their widespread global use has created high demand for replacement components, making the availability of spares crucial to preventing unexpected machinery downtime.

AIRJET LOOM

- Projectile Sulzer
- Somet
- Vamatex
- Sulzer Rapier
- Nuova Pignone
- Saurer
- Dornier
- Muller
- Picanol Omni
- Toyota
- Tsudakoma

Airjet looms are the most modern and expensive machines, with greater running speed, which pushes the wider textile industry to raise production levels and modernize its operations. Not many textile companies have shifted to airjet looms, and spares are scarce because fewer of these machines are in the market.

Obtaining spares for these machines directly from the manufacturer involves a great deal of paperwork and makes the spares expensive. To cut costs and relieve our clients of this pressure, we keep a large number of spares in store, ready for delivery. The spares and accessories in store cover the following looms:

WEAVING

Besides spares for textile machinery, our major focus is weaving machines. Whether it uses shuttle or shuttleless technology, and whatever type of woven fabric is being made, from fashion fabric to industrial fabric, we have the right machine for it. We are major dealers of the following weaving machinery.

Sizing

A sizing machine's condition is judged by evenness of sizing, thread tension and degree of drying, and its value depends on its level of automation, such as PLC, display technology, drives and switching devices.

We have the experience and knowledge to evaluate sizing machines against varying factors and their location, so we supply our customers the right machine of their choice.

Warping

There are different types of warping machines in the open market, and buyers are easily misled by sellers who sell them for far more than the product is worth.

We eliminate the risk involved in purchasing such machines by examining their key features and condition, drawing on our experience and technical knowledge of how these machines are manufactured.

We therefore study the various machines in the market and select the top-quality ones that match our client's requirements.

Spinning

The quality of a textile product is determined by the quality of the material used. Raw-material quality is a natural phenomenon, but product quality depends on various parameters, and spinning plays a large part in it.

Spinning is the initial stage and determines the quality of the final product. Although our role in importing spinning machinery is modest, we search the globe for the best machines to fulfil our clients' needs.

Spinning Testing Equipment

To ensure that textile products are of high quality, they must be checked on the production line from time to time.

Their parameters need to be measured at the initial stage using testing equipment. We deal in equipment that verifies the basic parameters of yarn produced in spinning industries, namely:

- Mass variation tester
- Tensile tester
- Bundle fibre tester
- Electronic wrap reel
- Manual wrap block

Services

Today, customer satisfaction is the key element for moving ahead in the competitive global market. In our line of business, the vital aspect in reaching new heights and overcoming rivals is customer satisfaction. To achieve this, we treat every customer as our first, providing all the information within our knowledge and seeing the whole process through.

Apart from trading in textile spares and machinery, we provide service to our customers during loom erection through a team of experts who know the product. Our experts service weaving machinery and electronic equipment on a regular basis.

A dobby machine needs an expert with up-to-date knowledge of the technology and a thorough understanding of the machine's working principle. Our team brings together such experts, and we also train people on request from our customers.

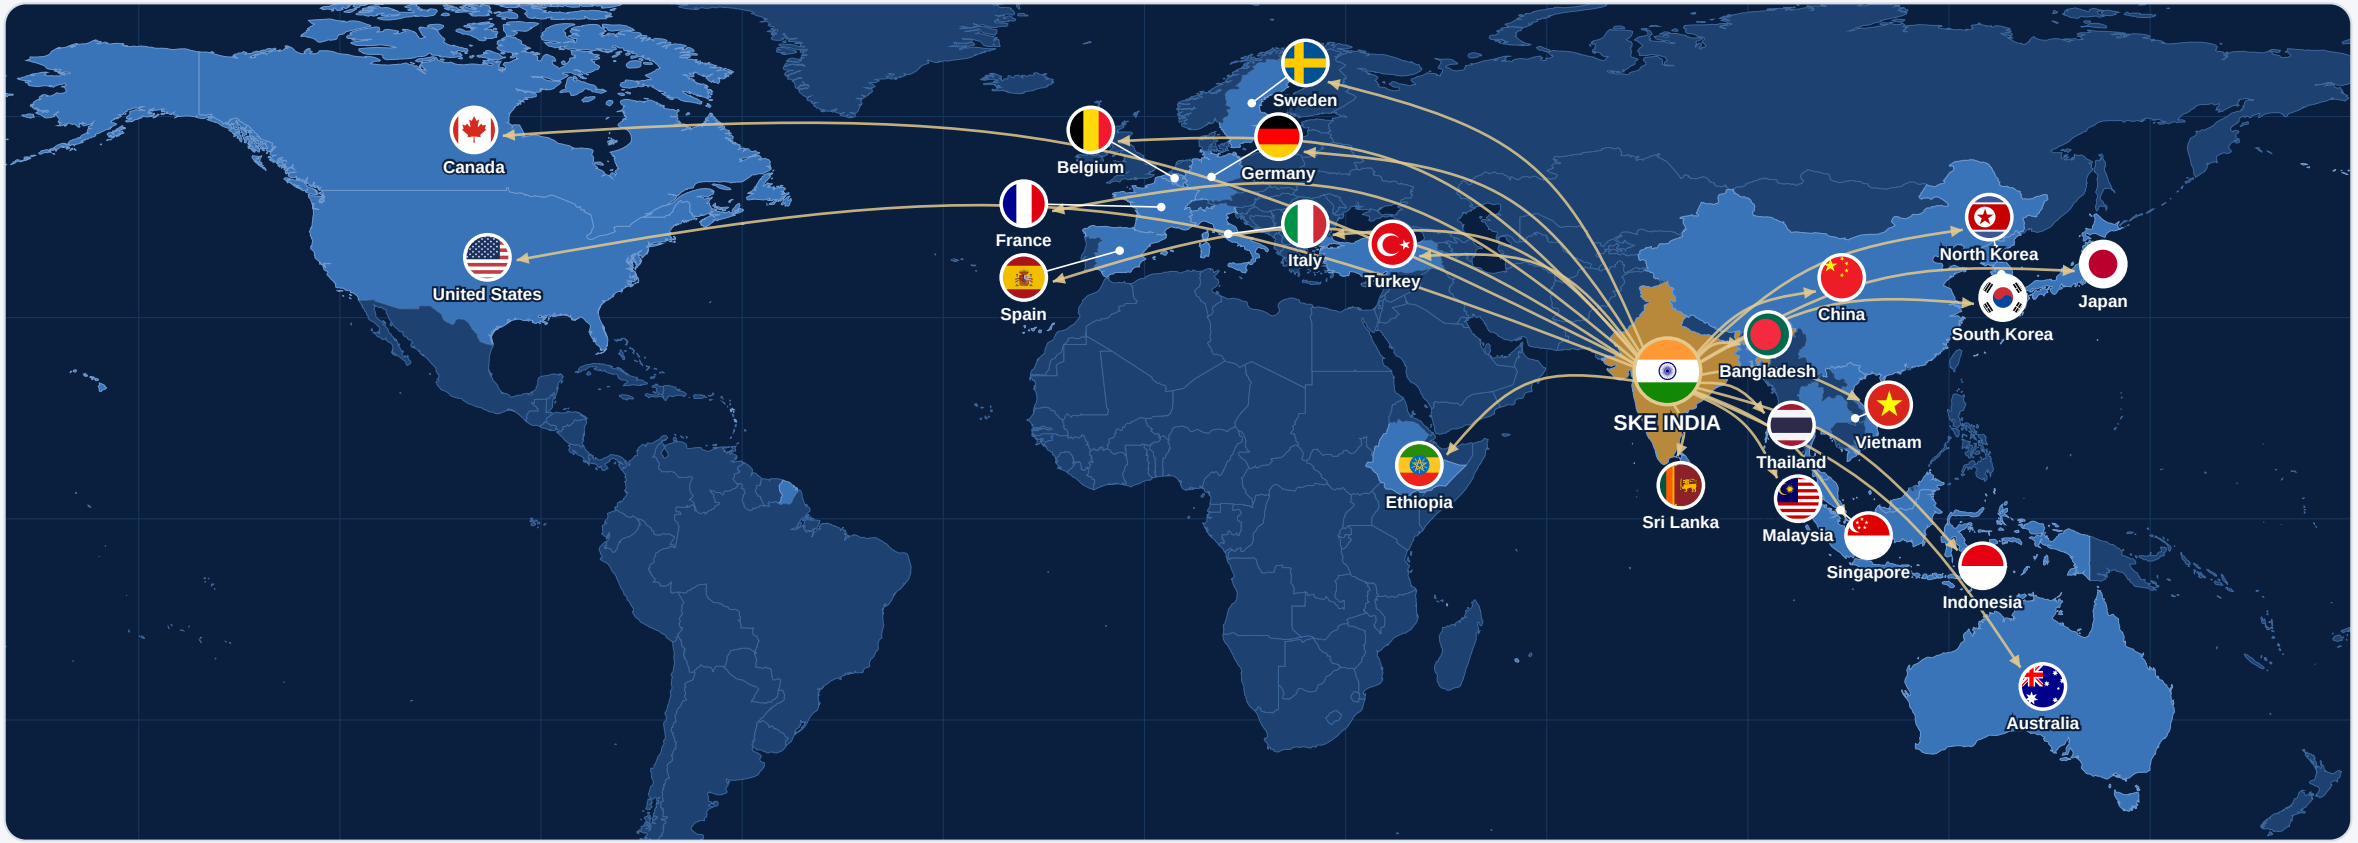

Brands We Deal In

We source and supply textile machinery spare parts from leading global brands, ensuring genuine quality, compatibility and reliable supply for your textile weaving machinery requirements.
